This following is the introductory paragraphs of your composition. Please read carefully of the points being made in the writing, form your own point(s), then analyze these examples and present your arguments (your own point(s) of view or attitude) to finish the composition, and perhaps with one or two examples of your own: Content 50%, English 50%. You can take any position as you wish. However, it should be within the range of the discussion; if not, there will be no point in Content Section. Please limit your words to 300 words.

A camel walked cross a dessert with a fly on his back. The fly laughed at the camel and thanked him for carry him through the dessert. The camel looked at the fly and replayed that "I didn't know you were on my back. You don't have much weight. Don't think too highly of yourself. You are nobody." Bernard Shaw once played with a little girl he didn't know out of sheer boredom. When the little girl was ready to go home, Bernard Shaw told her to tell her mom that Mr. Bernard Shaw had played games with her daughter the whole afternoon. The little girl responded to him that "you could tell your mom that Mary had played games with her son the whole afternoon."

A freshman of Peking University asked an old man at the Gate to look after his suitcase while he explored the school on his first day of arrival. This student found it the next day that the old man he thought was the gate keeper was actually the Vice President of the University, Gixianlin, a highly reputable scholar on Eastern and Western literature. Mr. Gi did not mind being treated as a gate keeper and was gladly helping this young freshman.

Some people believe that thinking highly of oneself display a self-confidence which is a positive sign of self-image. Self-confidence, most people believe, can build up a positive attitude toward life and be successful in learning, career, and many other aspects. On the other hands, some people may view not over-estimate self-image as cultivation, a bearing, a high state of mind, a maturity of mentality. It will create a kinder society.
